

Appendix 2

In the FTC report of the year 2000, they say that it is needed to have a legislation to help to increase the implementation of the fair information practices online. They analyzed the online environment and have shown that websites have increased their privacy disclosures from 1998 to 2000. Random sample are 335 websites which are e-commerce websites in a wide range of different sectors, hosting websites and sites that provide information (news, entertainment). The most popular group contains 91 of the 100 busiest sites in January 2000. They saw that the number of privacy disclosures has increased a lot since the last surveys of 1998 and 1999. However, that only says that they have any kind of privacy disclosures, that disclosure is often far from respecting the fair information principles.
